WNTC Covers Results

By Gil Norris

The news staff of WNTC announced at its last general meeting that, for the first time in station history, listeners will get an up to the minute outlook on election proceedings direct from the wires of United Press International. This special coverage, along with an analysis of the all-important last minute political maneuvers, will be presented by WNTC's around the clock staff of newsmen on Tuesday, November 8, from 10 PM until one of the candidates concedes the next morning.

The staff invites all that are interested to drop into the studio which is located in Room S-350 in Snell Hall. They will absolutely not close down until the successful candidate is announced. This coverage, especially designed for those who will find it inconvenient to watch the proceedings on television, will also bring you the latest returns and trends in the congressional and gubernatorial races. For the last word in the national elections, tune in to WNTC this Tuesday evening.
